Publish date: 13 November 2015

MMP Tax was announced as the winner for 'best tax firm' at the glittering TIGA awards ceremony held at LSO St. Luke's Old Street in London on 12 November 2015.

The awards celebrate the best in creativity, innovation and business in the UK games industry.

There to present the award to Director of MMP, David Marshall, and Technology Consultant at MMP, Emily Woollacott, was TIGA's Chief Executive Officer, Dr Richard Wilson.

MMP Tax has been a supporter of TIGA for a number of years helping lobby for the Video Games Tax Relief (VGTR) scheme to be introduced into the UK. 18 months on from that introduction of tax breaks for the UK games industry, leaders of UK games development came together at the awards dinner, in a celebration of the excellence of small and large games studios producing incredibly creative and inspiring work over the past year.

The award for best tax team recognises excellence in tax work, sound business processes and outstanding commercial results for the gaming industry companies.

MMP is an independent specialist technology tax consultancy firm and works with TIGA member games studios, to ensure that members gain maximum value from the Video Games Tax Relief and R&D Tax Relief schemes; including assisting them with the cultural test certification from the British Film Institute as a part of a full service offering.

David Marshall, Director at MMP Tax Limited, commented:

"MMP is thrilled to have won the award in the category of best tax firm from TIGA and pleased to be supporting TIGA members with their claims for R&D Tax Relief and Video Games Tax Relief. The welcome addition of Video Games Tax Relief to existing technology tax schemes, means that UK games development studios will not only benefit directly from these tax incentives but also from the positive impact they have on the industry as a whole".
